Jesse James, Billy the Kid, and Bonnie and Clyde are just a few of the most famous outlaws in American history. They robbed banks, trains, and stagecoaches, and they killed anyone who got in their way. But they also had a Robin Hood-like quality, and many people saw them as heroes who were fighting against the rich and powerful.

In the 20th century, criminals like Al Capone and Lucky Luciano built vast criminal empires that spanned the globe. They controlled the illegal liquor trade, gambling, and prostitution, and they were responsible for countless murders. But they also had a glamorous side, and they were often seen as symbols of the Roaring Twenties.

In the 1960s and 1970s, a new generation of criminals emerged. They were motivated by political ideology, and they saw themselves as revolutionaries fighting against the establishment. The Weather Underground and the Symbionese Liberation Army were two of the most notorious groups, and they were responsible for bombings, kidnappings, and murders.

Today, criminals, cutthroats, and rebels continue to make headlines. They are involved in everything from drug trafficking to cybercrime to terrorism. But no matter what their crimes, they all share a common desire to live outside the law.

The stories of these criminals, cutthroats, and rebels are fascinating and often tragic. They are a reminder that even the most notorious criminals are human beings, with their own motivations and desires. They are also a reminder that the line between good and evil is often blurred, and that even the most heinous crimes can be committed in the name of a higher purpose.

Jesse James

Jesse James was one of the most famous outlaws in American history. He was born in Missouri in 1847, and he began his criminal career at a young age. He robbed banks, trains, and stagecoaches, and he killed anyone who got in his way.

Billy the Kid

Billy the Kid was another famous American outlaw. He was born in New York City in 1859, but he grew up in the American West. He began his criminal career at a young age, and he quickly became known for his ruthlessness and his skill with a gun.

Billy the Kid was involved in the Lincoln County War, a range war that took place in New Mexico in the 1870s. He was also involved in several other shootings and killings.

Billy the Kid was killed in 1881 by Sheriff Pat Garrett. He was just 21 years old.

Bonnie and Clyde

Bonnie and Clyde were a notorious couple of outlaws who robbed banks and killed people in the 1930s. Bonnie Parker was born in Texas in 1910, and Clyde Barrow was born in Texas in 1909. They met in 1930, and they quickly became a couple.

Bonnie and Clyde were known for their daring robberies and their skill with guns. They were also known for their glamorous lifestyle and their love for each other.

Bonnie and Clyde were killed in 1934 by police officers. They were just 24 and 25 years old.

Al Capone

Al Capone was a notorious American gangster who controlled the illegal liquor trade in Chicago in the 1920s. He was born in Italy in 1899, and he came to the United States as a child. He began his criminal career as a bouncer in a Chicago speakeasy.

Capone quickly rose through the ranks of the Chicago Outfit, and he eventually became the boss of the organization. He was known for his ruthlessness and his brutality, and he was responsible for the deaths of many people.

Capone was convicted of tax evasion in 1931, and he was sentenced to 11 years in prison. He died in 1947.

Lucky Luciano

Lucky Luciano was a notorious American gangster who controlled the illegal drug trade in the United States in the 1930s and 1940s. He was born in Italy in 1897, and he came to the United States as a child. He began his criminal career as a member of the Five Points Gang in New York City.

Luciano quickly rose through the ranks of the New York underworld, and he eventually became the boss of the organization. He was known for his intelligence and his ruthlessness, and he was responsible for the deaths of many people.

Luciano was convicted of pandering in 1936, and he was sentenced to 30 to 50 years in prison. He was deported to Italy in 1946.

The Weather Underground

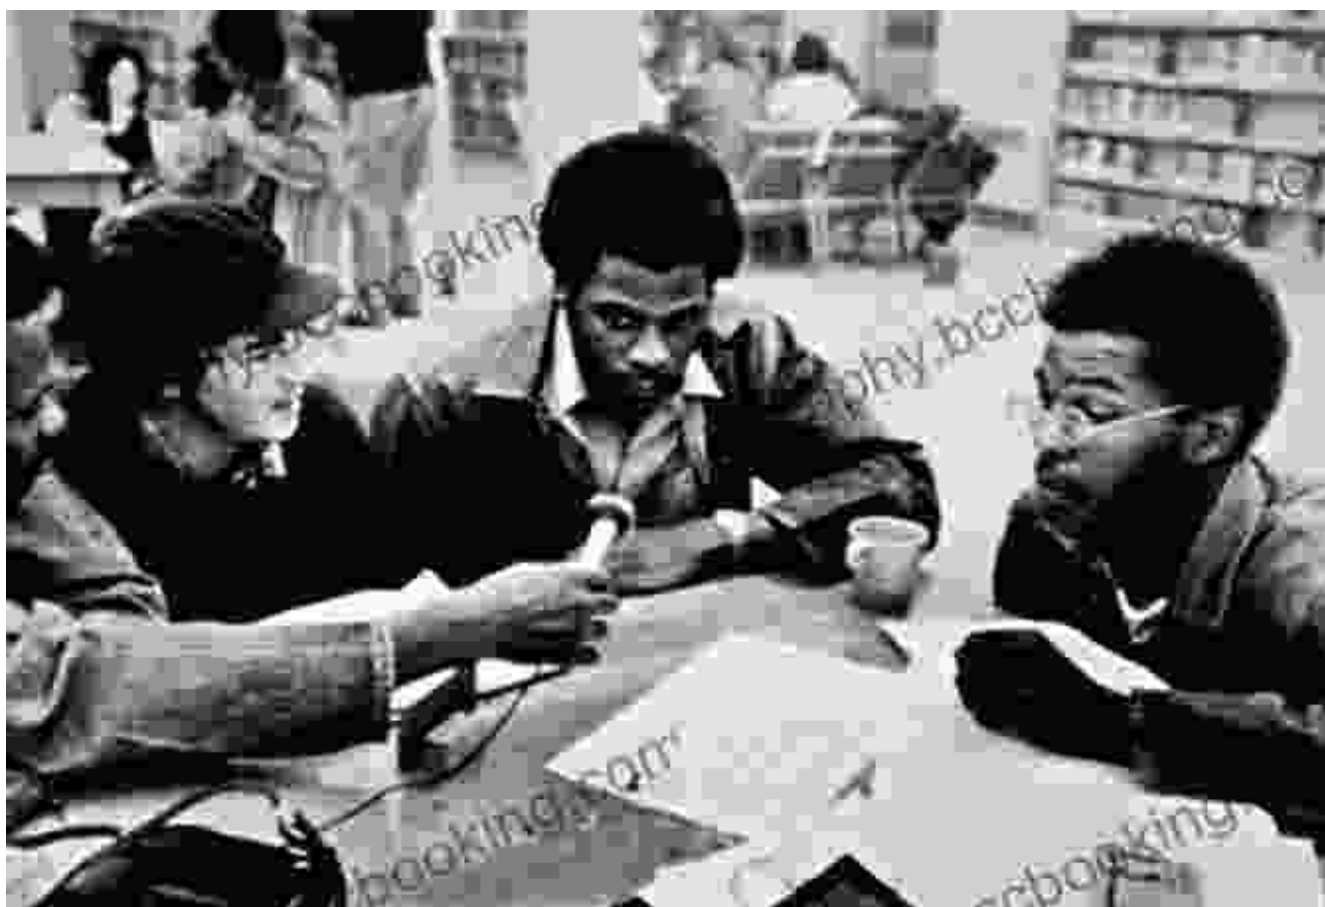

The Weather Underground was a radical American group that was active in the 1960s and 1970s. The group was inspired by the writings of Mao Zedong, and they believed that the United States was a fascist state that needed to be overthrown.

The Weather Underground was responsible for a series of bombings, kidnappings, and murders. The group also robbed banks and stole money to fund their activities.

The Weather Underground was dismantled in the 1980s, but some of its members remain at large.

The Symbionese Liberation Army

The Symbionese Liberation Army (SLA) was a radical American group that was active in the 1970s. The group was founded by Donald DeFreeze, and its members included Patricia Hearst, the granddaughter of newspaper magnate William Randolph Hearst.

The SLA was responsible for a series of kidnappings, bombings, and shootings. The group also robbed banks and stole money to fund its activities.

The SLA was dismantled in 1974, and six of its members were killed in a shootout with police officers.

The stories of these criminals, cutthroats, and rebels are fascinating and often tragic. They are a reminder that even the most notorious criminals are human beings, with their own motivations and desires. They are also a reminder that the line between good and evil is often blurred, and that even the most heinous crimes can be committed in the name of a higher purpose.
